Said old farmer Smith to his young neighbo Jones, this is a cheap house I have put up fo Tom, who has just married; he can improve or t when he makes money. "Do you call this cheap house, Mr. Smith," replied young Jones. "Well I don't. It hasn't got a sash, there are no banisters to the stairs, and the doors are so mean they will swag so in a year that it will be almost impossible to open and shut them. You have wasted more money on big joists, usoless rafters and unnecessary framing than would have finished the house in the most comfortable style. WHAT DOES REASON SAY?

The little mongoose when bitten by a deadly serpent resorts to a certain plant, cats of it, and escapes the effect of the poison. That is instinct. Human beings on the other hand, must depend n reason and experience in selecting the means of protecting health and life against unwholesome influences. Now what does reason say on this vital subject? Does it not tell us that to inivgorate and purify the system is the best way to protest it against the invisible poison which generates disease? Surely it does. The next question is, what guide shall we follow in choosing a me dicinal safeguard? Reason replies let your mouitor be experience. Well, the experience of eighteen years comprised in one unbroken series of satisfactory testimonials assures us that Hostetter's Stomach Bifter: possess strengthening regulating and antiseptic properties which are not combined in the same happy proportions in any other preparation extant. This therefore is the antidote to which reason bids us resort when our health is imperilled either by the malaria which produces epidemic disorders, or by any other cause, whether inherent and constitutional or connected with our habits, occupations and pursuits. The venom of a noxious reptile is scarcely more subtile and dangerous than that which lurks in foul air and impure water. To escape the fevers, London, September 14.—The Emperor enjoys entire freedom at Wilhomshality.
